

Keane International Expertise

Nova Scotian Know-How

Voted one of Canada's top 100 employers, Keane is a leading business process and IT services firm that has been in business since 1965.

Headquartered in Boston, Massachusetts, Keane has locations world-wide, and right here in Nova Scotia. Recognizing the talented and skilled workforce, Keane established its first Advanced Development Centre (ADC) in Halifax, Nova Scotia, in 1997. With its focus on application development, integration, and outsourcing, the Halifax ADC enabled Keane to offer its U.S.-based clients the competitive and cost advantages of "nearshore" delivery services. These services leverage Nova Scotia's highly qualified technical workforce, while supporting clients in a low risk environment just a short flight away.

Keane's Halifax ADC was recently recognized as Canada's first IT services facility to be assessed at Level 5 Capability Maturity Model Integration (CMMI), an internationally recognized standard for evaluating and improving software processes. CMMI Level 5, the highest ranking, means an organization has achieved a state of continuous process optimization, driving operational efficiencies into IT organizations through the application of highly disciplined project management, application delivery, and measurement best practices.

Keane recognized early on that Nova Scotia is the best location for nearshore application development, and is part of Nova Scotia's booming IT sector
